General Pinckney from the Committee on Elections delivered in a report—

Ordered that the Report be taken into immediate consideration, which being read through was agreed to and is as follows—

Viz<sup>e</sup>—

Report

That Andrew Dunn Esquire is returned a Member for the District between Broad & Catawba rivers, and that he has been a resident in the said State & District for the space of near three Years, & has taken an Oath of Allegiance & fidelity to the State before a Justice of Peace, but has not complied with the terms of the late Act of Congress relative to naturalization, & therefore he is not yet a Citizen, tho' entitled to Citizenship, Your Committee therefore recommend that on his complying with the Terms required by the said Act (which he declared to your Committee he is willing to do so) that he be admitted to take his seat as a member of the Convention—

Your Committee further report that the Returning Officer for the parish of Goose creek had made no return of Aaron Loockock Esquire a Delegate elected for that parish— They therefore examined Witnesses on the Subject; and it appeared from the testimony of some of the Delegates from the said parish, that the said Aaron Loockock was duly elected a Delegate to represent the same in Convention—Your Committee therefore recommend that he be admitted to a seat in the Convention as a Member for Saint James's Parish Goose-creek—

To the President of the United States

Sir,

We the people of the State of South Carolina now met, & sitting in Convention, beg leave to address You, & to embrace this first opportunity, which has been afforded us, of congratulating You on your election to the high, and important station of President of the United States— Such, Sir, has been the impression made upon the publick mind by a due sense of your eminent service, and such the affection of a Nation, whose dearest rights you have defended, that one wish pervaded the whole Continent of placing you at the head of the Federal Republick, and of enjoying under your protection, as our first Magistrate, the blessings of that free government, for the attainment of which we are so much indebted to your exertions as our General—

The promises of your earlier life, Sir, had prepared your fellow citizens for your acceptance of the military command in the year 1775, when dangers and difficulties surrounded on all sides, and the prospect was dark, and gloomy, but they must ever remember with gratitude & admiration the wisdom and energy of that system, which could induce Men accustomed to the most perfect equality to submit to the rigorous duties of a camp, and thus convert the tumultuary array of an undisciplined yeomanry into a permanent force capable of making head against the Veteran army of our Enemies: with similar sentiments do they call to mind the efforts of that heroick fortitude which despaired not in worst of times, but rose superior to every misfortune, infusing new spirit into the bosoms of an unfortunate army, and animating them by the force of example to undergo the serverest toil with alacrity, and to endure with perserverance the most accumulated distress—

It was the will of an all-wise Providence that the great object we were contending for, should not be attained without some difficulty, and that we should be taught to observe, and to value the virtues, which spring up in adversity; but the time of our severe trial was at length to terminate, the cloud which had hover'd over us so long was at length dispelled, and the sun of American Glory appear'd in it's full splendour: to have borne this change of fortune with equanimity, to have employed the last hours of command in reconciling our gallant soldiers to a disappointment which their long sufferings during the war had but ill prepared them for, and having checked the rage of civil discord in it's infancy, to have resigned all power, and cheerfully descended into the walks of private life, are circumstances that must forever illumine the page of History, and which, as they can never be effaced from our remembrance, so we trust they will be deeply engraven upon the minds of our Posterity:—to transmit to that Posterity in it's native purity the spirit of a free constitution is the hope which animates us all, we hope also, that they will learn from us to cherish every grateful sentiment towards You, Sir, and that they will be proud, as we are, to participate individually in the honour which America may so justly claim to herself, of having produced a citizen whose love of glory was devoid of ambition, whose view embraced no objects but the freedom and the happiness of his Countrymen, whose integrity was equal to their most unbounded confidence, and who, combining the prudence of retreat, with all the active valour of attack, was at once the shield and the sword of his native country—

The tranquillity of retirement after the dangers of war and the fatigues of publick life, is one of those rewards which exalted merit seems ever entitled to, but which your fellow citizens were constrain'd to deny you; Independency had been established, but the arduous task of internal Legislation still remained, and the United States were yet to establish upon the firmest Basis that station amongst the nations of the earth which they had of Right assumed; called upon for this sacred purpose, You have listened, Sir, to the voice of your country, you have given a further proof of your never failing attachment to her interests, and we can only hope, in the warmest wishes which we form for the good of the publick weal, that your administration in the office of President of the United States may be as prosperous as your acceptance of it has been honorable and Patriotick.

We will not, Sir, by thus giving way to the effusions of our hearts any longer intrude upon that time which is devoted to the general good, but concluded with offering up our prayers to the great Father of the Universe, that he may be pleased to shed his influence over all your Councils, and that having saved your country, and given an awful lesson to all mankind, you may finally in the fullness of your years, close the long glories of an illustrious life—not only with the consciousness of having deserved, but with the comfort, and satisfaction of having received every proof of respect, and esteem from the heartfelt gratitude of your fellow citizens—

On Motion

Resolved that the Legislature, shall in their first Session under this Constitution regulate and establish by Laws all the Fees of the respective Courts & Offices throughout the State—

Ordered that the Resolution be referred to the Committee of Arrangements—

General Pinckney from the Committee of detail & arrangements, delivered in a partial report—
